National 4-H Achievement Day, Nov. 12

Virginia's 4-H Club members, some 62,000 strong, are planning many special activities for their part in National 4-H Achievement Day, November 12.

Dr. W. E. Skelton, state 4 - H Agent at VPI, says although the 4-H program is national in scope and worldwide in influence, the center of interest will be the local community where the "home folks" may see for themselves what the boys and girls are accomplishing.

In Virginia during the past year, 135 club members have received recognition as winners of state 4-H contests; 400 have been recognized as district winners; and 3,000 medals of honor have been awarded to county winners. Some $7,000 in college schoalrships have been awarded. Virginians have competed successfully with club members from other states.

On November 25, winners of 1955 state contests will entrain for Chicago and the National 4-H Club Congress.

Dr. Skelton pays special tribute to the 5,000 adult volunteer leaders who help with the 4-H program in the state. In addition, nearly 3,-000 older 4-H members are serving as junior leaders. Projects include all major phases of agriculture and home economics. A total of 95,000 individual projects are being conducted. Club activities also stress health, safety, citizenship, and leadership.

The 4-H program in Virginia is conducted by the VPI Agricultural Extension Service through county agricultural and home demonstration agents.

The County Court was composed ... justices of the county, who ... and appointed their own ... who had jurisdiction over ... police matters, trials of misdemeanors and slaves. It fixed the county levy and apportioned the same among white males over 21 years of age. The County Court appointed white male property owners over 21 years of age to open and keep up the roads of their respective vicinities.

The Governor appointed Joel Watkins first sheriff of Appomattox, with Samuel D. McDearmon, William J. McDearmon and William J. Watkins as his deputies. The sheriff's duty not only included law enforcement, but the collecion of taxes, and disbursement of same on order of the justices. Since there were no juries summoned in those days, the sheriff had to go out and find jurors when needed at each term of court.

John T. Bocock was first county clerk; Thomas S. Bocock the first commonwealth attorney, and Andrew B. Baker the first coroner. Upon the death of John T. Bocock, the first clerk, he was succeeded by his son, Henry F. Bocock, who served until 1860, when George T. Peers became clerk.

At this time there were eight post offices in the county and three towns. Bent Creek, formerly called Diuguidville, Pamplin, later called Pamplin City, and Spout Spring.

One authority says the name Appomattox is from an Indian word meaning "tobacoc plant country," another version is that is was named for an Indian tribe.

The first census was taken in 1850

1850	9,193
1860	8,889
1870	8,950
1880	10,080
1890	9,589
1900	9,662
1910	8,804
1920	9,255
1930	8,402
1940	9,020
1950	8,784. z

Scotch Irish from Pennsylvania were among the first settlers of what is now Appomattox County. Land was patented along Reedy Creek and Falling Rivers in the 1730's.

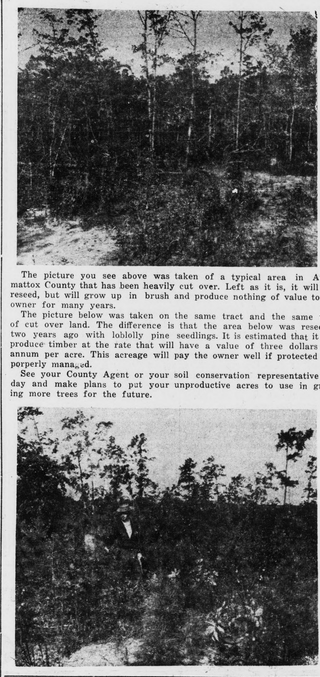
Foote's Sketches of North Carolina mentions that in 1755, Rev. Hugh McAden reached Mr. Thomas Dickson's at Falling River. "I tarried and preached at Falling River" said Mr. M'Adan. The Bedford County records show that in 1762 Robert Walker, of Bedford County (now Appomattox Co.) sold 2 acres of land on branches of Wreck Island Creek "where the meeting house now stands" to Thomas Dixon (the same man whom Mr. M'Aden visited. There were often discrepancies in spelling at that time.) in behalf of the Upper Falling Congregation. Witnesses Alexander Hunter, Turner Hunt Christian, Nathaniel Patterson.

In 1777 Presbytery met at Concord in Bedford County. This is what is now Old Concord. Hixburg, formerly Walker's Church, was also among the early churches of the county.

By 1760, dissatisfield members of the Established Church or Englishmen were moving westward. A number stopped in what is now Appomattox County, bought land and established homes. Some remained, others, both Scotch - Irish and English, continued their westward trek. Many people from this area moved westward through Pittsylvania, Henry and Patrick Counties to the Wilderness road into Tennessee and Kentucky, thence on Texas from Tennessee, and to Ohio, Inndiana, Illinois, Missouri and Nebraska from Kentucky. Some moved southward to North Carolina and Georgia.

Hunting season to open Nov. 20.

BEFORE AND AFTER



The picture you see above was taken of a typical area in Appomattox County that has been heavily cut over. Left as it is, it will not reseed, but will grow up in brush and produce nothing of value to the owner for many years.

The picture below was taken on the same tract and the same type of cut over land. The difference is that the area below was reseeded two years ago with loblolly pine seedlings. It is estimated that it will produce timber at the rate that will have a value of three dollars per annum per acre. This acreage will pay the owner well if protected and porperly managed.

See your County Agent or your soil conservation representative today and make plans to put your unproductive acres to use in growing more trees for the future.
